COUNTRY THREAT LEVEL & SECURITY INFORMATION

POWERED BY United Healthcare Global

Pedro Sanchez of the Socialist Party became prime minister on 2 June 2018 and recently formed a coalition government with the far-left Podemos after the November 2019 general election. The coalition government is the first coalition to form since the countrys return to democracy in 1977. While the government has departed from a hardline stance toward Catalan autonomy, the issue has remained a central one in Spanish politics. Corruption remains a problem for the Spanish government. The crime rate in Spain is moderate, and petty, opportunistic crime remains the primary security concern for travelers to the country. Demonstrations occur frequently in Spain and sometimes affect security conditions. Strikes take place periodically in Spain and have the potential to disrupt services used by foreign visitors, such as transportation. Terrorist activity perpetrated by Islamist extremists and other radical elements remains a security concern in Spain, particularly in larger cities. The Spanish government currently maintains the terror alert level at a four (high).
