Centrist Emmanuel Macron became France's president in May 2017. Macron leads the French government with Prime Minister Élizabeth Borne and a coalition of Macron's En March! Party and the Democratic Movement. In June 2024, the far-right National Rally party saw victory during the European Parliamentary elections. As a result, widespread protests against the National Rally party have occurred throughout France and ahead of snap Parliamentary elections called by Macron. The economy remains the top challenge facing Macron's government. Crime, mostly in the form of petty theft, is the security concern that is most likely to affect travelers in France. Racially-motivated crime has become a growing problem in recent years. Strikes occur frequently in France and can disrupt services used by travelers, particularly transportation. Demonstrations and protests are common occurrences in the country and can occasionally disrupt traffic or result in violence. The threat of terrorism remains a significant concern across France
